3. Digging Deeper:

- The responsibility to build a relationship is on both people. Do you think it's possible for just one party to build? Why or why not?
- In envisioning your ideal marriage, could you each take turns describing the key characteristics you value?
- Following that, considering your descriptions, do you believe it is more crucial to find the right person who naturally aligns with those ideals, or is the emphasis on putting in substantial effort to cultivate and maintain the desired relationship traits?
- Pastor said that one of the keys to building a successful marriage is HUMILITY. Can you find what the Bible says about humility? (Google;) What strikes you about these verses?
- What do you think are polar opposites to the humility Bible calls us to? Why?
- "Sometimes to win the war, you have to lose the battle". What does that mean to you?
- One of the keys to a great relationship is clear communication. Is communication hard for you? Why? Who do you know that is great at expressing what they want/think/need/feel? What can you learn from them?
